

Doctorate of Education, EdD

The program is centered in Indigenous knowledge systems and draws upon Indigenous teaching and learning methods. The program aligns with the UW-Green Bay's mission to provide an interdisciplinary, problem-focused educational experience that prepares students to think critically and address complex issues in a multicultural and changing world. The Ed.D. in First Nations Education enriches the quality of life for students and the community by embracing the educational value of diversity, encouraging engaged citizenship, and serving as an intellectual and cultural resource for First Nations and non-First Nations communities. In addition, the Ed.D. advances the institutional goal of improving teaching and learning with its focus on First Nations Elder epistemology and pedagogy.

The program is practitioner focused and driven by professional and community needs. The Education Doctorate (Ed.D.) is an applied degree that addresses genuine issues and generates knowledge about First Nations. The Ed.D. in First Nations Education prepares leaders to transform institutions and promote cultural resurgence and the vitality of future generations.

The program draws students from an array of professional backgrounds including: PK-12 administrators in school districts with First Nations students, tribal college administrators and teachers, tribal education administrators, tribal social service administrators, tribal health care administrators, tribal library administration, First Nations governmental officials, tribal school district administrators, tribal career service and vocational rehabilitation administrators, tribal historians, tribal human resources administrators, and others.

The 54-credit degree program is offered over 4 years. The degree consists of a set of core courses offered primarily in face to face settings, reflecting the oral tradition. Classes are offered on weekends with limited online delivery to accommodate working professionals. Students enter the program in a cohort and work collaboratively in classes during the first two years of the program, including summer. Students complete the degree with a culminating applied dissertation project in years three and four. The dissertation project is developed in collaboration with First Nations governments, communities, and individuals. It is a scholarly project that impacts the Tribal World.

More information, admission requirements, required application materials and applications are on the UW-Green Bay Graduate Studies website.

Ed.D. | First Nations Education Learning Outcomes

Four Core Areas:

1. Foundations – Sociocultural, historical, and political grounding in intersectional educational contexts:
 - a. Students evaluate and interpret education as a complex intergenerational activity and cultural institution.
2. Philosophy of education and indigenous oral teachings:
 - a. Students develop, practice, and critique educational organizational and institutional policies related to administrative leadership, curriculum development, and assessment and program evaluation.
 - b. Students are able to assess key needs and develop effective strategies to design and lead appropriate intervention strategies including advocacy, policy development, and program design and evaluation.
 - c. Students formulate a philosophy of education and Indigenous Original Teachings.
3. Focus on praxis, service, and connection to the needs of tribal nations and communities:
 - a. Students interpret complex cultural and academic concepts effectively in oral and written forms as necessary and appropriate to the research question, purpose, or audience.
 - b. Students analyze the role that education in various forms plays in tribal nation building and create strategies sustaining sovereignty.
4. Research Methods and Knowledge Systems:
 - a. Students compare, contrast, and implement research and practice in holistic Indigenous knowledge systems (Shared Core Values, Original Teachings).
 - b. Students demonstrate proficiency in qualitative, quantitative, and Indigenous research methodology, and will select each/all as necessary and appropriate to the research question, purpose, or audience.

Admissions Applications for the Ed.D. in First Nations Education has three parts:

Part One - Electronic Application:

Applicants must complete an electronic application for admissions. You can access it here: (<https://apply.wisconsin.edu/>)<https://apply.wisconsin.edu/>

Once you begin the electronic application process, you will complete the following (A & B) in the electronic application:

1. Master's degree from a regionally accredited institution (will consider applicants with a bachelor's degree who demonstrates an equivalent of 4 or more years of learning from oral scholars or knowledge bearers.)
2. Application Fee: The non-refundable application fee is $56 if you are applying to a degree program. Applicants pay the application fee in the online electronic application. Applicants may also send a check or U.S. money order to UW Green Bay Office of Graduate Studies (address below).
3. Application Written Statements: The Ed.D. in First Nations Education requires all applicants to submit two writing statements in support of their application to the program:
 - personal statement of intent (800-1000 words)
 - statement of scholarly interests (1200-1500 words).

Part Two - Additional Admissions Requirements Submitted Directly to UW Green Bay Office of Graduate Studies:

Submit the following items to: UW Green Bay, Graduate Studies Office, 2420 Nicolet Drive, Green Bay, WI 54311-7001 or gradstu@uwgb.edu:

1. Post-Secondary/Graduate Transcripts:
 - Official transcripts must be submitted from every post-secondary school attended by the applicant.
 - Official "course-by-course" transcript evaluations from either Education Services Evaluators (ECE) or World Education Services (WES) are required for all school attended outside of the US. The transcript evaluation must be sent to the Office of Graduate Studies directly from the company issuing the evaluation. Transcripts or transcript evaluations sent from applicants are not considered official and will not be accepted.
 - If you have attended UW-Green Bay, we can provide this transcript for your application file. There is no need to request it.
 - If you have attended UW-Green Bay within the last 5 years and your post-secondary transcripts are on file, we will not ask you to resend them.
2. Résumé:
 - Applicants must send an updated résumé (2 page maximum) via email attachment to the UW-Green Bay Graduate Studies Office at: gradstu@uwgb.edu or upload to the application system. In cases of low GPA or professional experience that does not clearly relate to the Ed.D. in First Nations Education program, the admission committee may request additional information in support of an application.
3. References:
 - Applicants are required to submit three letters of evaluation. References must submit their letters directly via email attachment to the UW-Green Bay Graduate Studies Office at gradstu@uwgb.edu. The Graduate Studies Office will update the Application Checklist upon receipt of each letter of evaluation. Please allow 2-3 business days for the system to be updated. Applicants are responsible to ensure that all references have completed and submitted their letters by the application deadline.

Part Three - On-Campus Interview and Essay:

Candidates under consideration for admission are required to complete

1. An on-campus oral interview and
2. An on-campus written essay.

Both will be conducted with the First Nations Education doctoral admission committee. Both the interview and essay portions of the admissions process will take place in-house on the UW Green Bay campus. The committee will notify applicants with regard to the scheduling of dates and times.

The faculty in the Ed.D. in First Nations Education represent a wide range of teaching, practice, and research experiences. Both oral traditional and academic scholars collaborate and co-teach classes together. The oral traditional scholars provide an experience in listening, observing, doing, and inquiring that fits within indigenous cultural contexts. This offers students an opportunity to experience learning in traditional First Nations approaches.
